

KNOW BEFORE YOU USE

So, you're taking a remote class, the lectures are pre-recorded and you don't understand the class material. What do you do? Google it, use Chegg, look on Course Hero, the internet is a place full of information, but what happens when you use those resources to cheat (intentionally or unintentionally)?

JEOPARDIZE YOUR DEGREE

Academic Integrity gives value to your degree. Violations of academic integrity can not only result in a failing grade or assignment, but calls into question the validity of your work and knowledge and ultimately the legitimacy of your degree.

RISK GRAD SCHOOL

An incident of Academic Misconduct will be marked on your disciplinary record. Graduate schools, medical schools, and law schools could ask for your disciplinary record and having a record could impact your eligibility.

FACULTY RELATIONS

To act without integrity not only discredits your own abilities as a student, but also violates the pact between student and teacher. If the class syllabus states that outside or online resources are not allowed, do not use these!

SCHOLARSHIPS

Some scholarships require that a student has no disciplinary record. If you are found responsible for academic misconduct, you will have a mark on your disciplinary record, therefore making you ineligible for scholarships, financial aid, etc.

JOB INELIGIBILITY

Some on-campus jobs will ask to check your disciplinary record as part of their eligibility requirements. If you have a mark on your record this could impact the job application process and could result in disqualification from the employment pool.

Don't Do It!

- Submit coursework on Course Hero or other websites to gain "unlocks."
- Use Chegg or other websites to cheat during an exam.
- Use Discord or other messaging apps to cheat (i.e. compare answers, collaborate on answers, copy answers).
